CHAPTER 3

I'm watching spot

ALSO IN THIS
PAGE 10

Ogata, a serious salaryman, is said to have a blemish free life throughout his school years and into his working life. He was an honor student that would pay attention to his surroundings, and without exception, would not allow for prejudices to be made as he believed that one's hands should be extended to save the weak.

What buds from the seeds of misfortune
are three flowers.

His co-worker, Ayase, feels irritated by this. His hatred becomes stronger as Ogata waves his ideals of justice over his head. He uses a new employee (and prostitute) recruited by the company's president, named Kamiya, and devises a plan to deceive Ogata.

A man that wants to get rid of the unavoidable darkness that resides within him.

A man that has no choice but to be a bystander to his parent's fate.

A man that discovers love and hope in a life where he can't find a purpose to live.

Punishment, grief, emptiness... each ivy overlaps and entangles. Just when flowers of different color show... a dark and gloomy garden will surely leave a new seed in your heart.

What Is Omegaverse?

Omegaverse is a particular genre in BL that originated from the West. It started as a product of a SF (Sci-Fi) parody, as it was known to be used in works by fans. It was at the time of creating SF that depicted the love between werewolves and their ecological system, that the three existence and classification systems of alpha, beta, and omega made its appearance. After that, the iconic element of a hierarchical system of male domination of women and racial discrimination increased.

The interpretation of Omegaverse is dependent on the writer, as there are an infinite number of versions available. Since the original creator is unknown, there isn't one correct setting to abide by. Although this individual freedom is one of the charms of the Omegaverse genre, as a reader, it is the threshold of increasingly having to feel the need to confirm each author's version of their Omegaverse world before progressing onto their story. It is with this that we want a lot of people to enjoy this genre with ease that we launched "the Omegaverse Project." It is a unique new wonder with an infinite possibility to make the heart throb in the world of BL, that is the aim of "the Omegaverse Project." This book is entirely based on this world.

* The meaning behind "verse" in Omegaverse has a lot of misunderstanding, but in actuality, comes from "universe" (space). In regards to Japan, it is with this paradoxical expression of a parallel world that it is used.

A World Where Everyone Can Get Pregnant

During ancient times, humanity was divided into males and females. However, there was a sudden decline in the human population that paved the way for an evolution. The term "males and females" remained in shape only as now, all genders are capable of giving birth. For males, their uterus is connected to their anus. For females, their clitoris takes the shape of a penis when excitement occurs, thus making ejaculation possible.

(Alpha Males)

(Beta & Omega Males)

(Alpha, Beta, & Omega Females)

(The base of the penis is an organ called bulbos-glands (knob). Only when an alpha is greeted by heat and during the time of ejaculation will this bloom. At this time, their penis will not be able to escape from their partner's genitalia. During the heat season, they will ejaculate for 20-30 minutes. The semen quantity is approximately 20ml (whereas on average, the semen quantity for a beta and omega is 3 ml). The fertilization rate is 100%. Even in normal conditions (i.e., when not in heat), 10 ml of semen is ejaculated, which is still more than that of a beta or an omega.)

The Difference Between alpha, beta, and omega

- Males only have a bulbos glands (also called a knob).
- They experience heat.
- During heat, they continuously ejaculate for 20-30 minutes.
- During heat, the possibility of impregnating someone is 100%.

- They experience heat.
- Even though they can be turned on by an omega's heat, there's a possibility of maintaining their reason and self-control.

- They experience heat.
- Their heat seasons are once a month for 7 days.
- Outside of heat, the possibility of getting pregnant is very low.
- They carry sex pheromones.

What Is Heat?

Omega

Sex pheromones are created by the hormones within an omega's body. These pheromones are mixed in body excretions, such as sweat, and secreted (to the environment). This same sex pheromone is not secreted by alphas or betas. Thus, the name of this pheromone is commonly called the "omega pheromone".

For three weeks in a month a large amount of the omega's hormone is concentrated within their body. When their heat approaches, their scent goes from mellow to strong and releases an sex pheromone. These pheromones are continuously released for seven days. The development of the pheromone quality in omega is thought to be brought about because originally omega had low survival conception and that the sex used to reduce alpha's that had a high fertilization rate.

Alpha

Alphas experience an outbreak of heat after reacting to an omega's pheromone. After being hit with the heat once, their reasoning abilities vanish, and they are inclined to act violently.

* One's first heat arrives at about the age of 13-18 years old. (The same pertains to alphas and their own heat.)

An Alpha and Omega's Pair System

When an alpha bites around the nape of an omega while having sexual intercourse during heat, the two become "a pair". In a situation where these two become a pair, an omega won't be able to attract another alpha and cause them to change and react. However, the omega won't be able to have sex with anyone not their "pair" during their heat sessions. If they choose to have sex with anyone not their "pair", then the omega will experience dizziness, headaches, and nausea. As a general rule, the bond between the pair cannot be broken.

< An omega that is bitten by an alpha >

<Bitemarks>

The bitemark formed during the pair formation will always remain.

<Neck Collar>

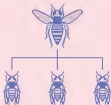

In order to prevent being bitten by an unwanted person, an omega uses a neck collar as protection.

Fated Pair

When an alpha and omega's pheromones react (not having anything to do with heat), they are faced with a sense of attraction for the other. They experience such feelings with only one look. Without exception, they develop a state of mutual love. However, this is an extremely rare case and is wondered if this is actually a folk tale.

The Pair Mechanism

During an alpha's heat, a trigger is set as soon as the alpha bites the omega's neck, and the hierarchical system of pheromones is emitted to the now paired omega. As a result, the omega is incapable of having sex with anyone outside of their pair. Additionally, when the pair omega is in heat, any other alpha that is not their pair is now capable of controlling their own heat. This method of heat suppression is used as a key for the development of "heat suppressants." However, this case cannot be further explained.

[See]

According to the hierarchical system of pheromones, the maturity of the ovaries of the mother that is not the queen bee is suppressed, and she is made to take the role of a working bee.

Hierarchical System

[Out of Ten People]

2 are Alphas

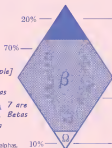

7 are Betas

1 is an Omega

In a class of thirty, six are alphas, twenty-one are betas, and only three are omegas

Only males with a bulbourethra (knot) have a high fertilization rate towards omegas. Even though other characteristics of their physical superiority, outside of their sperm count and their social class difference of pheromones have not been demonstrated, it is thought through out society that alphas are known to be superior to betas and omegas.

Consists of the majority of the human population. Betas were fundamentally used on the side by alphas, but in recent years, due to the efforts of the individuals and their relationship in marriage, there are situations where they are able to build a status not differing from an alpha.

They experience heat, and have the lowest fertilization rate. Therefore, they are looked upon as having an inferior existence compared to the alphas and betas. Until the development of heat suppressants, omegas were wasted inside the house without taking part in outside work.

Alpha, Beta, and Omega Daily Life

Co-Education Schools

A special course called "the alpha class" is available. Betas and omegas are also able to voluntarily participate depending on their intelligence. Because alphas are thought to be superior than betas and omegas, they are placed in this class. They take classes that are more advanced than that of the general courses.

Alpha Schools

Entrance is only allowed to alphas. Even though there are "alpha only schools", there are no "beta only" or "omega only" schools.

[A]

They mainly take roles such as company president or other positions of importance. Family businesses are also abundant, and due to strong networking connections with other alphas, rising to the top is easy for people of this type.

[B]

Depending on their own individual abilities, they are able to have positions not differing from an alpha. However, they are fundamentally hated by alphas.

[O]

Due to the popularization of heat suppressants, employment has increased for omegas. However, due to the prejudice towards omegas in the hiring process, they receive welfare money as a means of supplement from the government.

Marriage

It is a general rule that alphas, betas, and omegas marry within their own kind. In particular, alphas have a sense of elitism and even order to prevent tarnishing their blood line or reducing their land. For heredity's sake, they have high regards to marrying other alphas. In general, the type percentage of a child being born is 1:1:1. Thus, the privileged class tend to have the control of increasingly monopolizing the alphas. Because of this, it is generally thought that betas and omegas that marry an alpha do so only to "marry into a family of rank" or "marry into money". After around the 1950s, due to the spreading of the civil rights movement, marriages between betas and omegas, and alphas and omegas, are increasing. However, it is hard to say if such a heterogeneous marriage is normal.

[The obligations set for an omega in order for them to protect themselves:]

1. From junior high school until the duration of their school time, they are expected to submit documents of their medical history.
2. They are also expected to submit their medical papers to their employer.
3. They have to have their heat suppressant medication always on hand for immediate use.

What are heat suppressants?

These were developed in the 1950s exclusively for omegas. Using the composition of an alpha hormone as the core, in order to suppress the omega hormones, it works to reduce the secretion of the omega's sex hormones. The effectiveness differs for the individual as there are omegas that are allergic to these or some for whom these medications have no effect. Therefore, the development of a new medicine is being conducted.

[Pill]

Taken once a day for everyday use, it is known to have no side effects, though it depends on the individual.

[Heat Suppressants]

Thrus injected in the arm or leg when heat occurs. Within five minutes, the heat is able to subside. However, side effects are strong, including headaches, nausea, and dizziness. Heat suppressants are reserved on standby at many public locations.

* It is necessary to go to the hospital in order to get a prescription for both of these medicines.
